News

- In Vietnam, bars and other entertainment venues will be allowed to reopen—the last businesses to receive permission. Vietnam has not reported local transmission of cases for 54 days. Foreign nationals have been banned from entering the country since March; but international flights are set to reopen gradually, depending on the coronavirus situation in the countries involved.
- In Korea, it is now mandatory to register with a smartphone-based QR code when going to bars, nightclubs or other entertainment venues. The new measure is part of the overall contact tracing system and was introduced after several new clusters, including one in Seoul’s nightclub district, emerged over recent weeks.
- From today, Indonesia is allowing airlines to resume domestic air travel at 70% of their passenger capacity. Strict social-distancing rules and mandatory virus testing for passengers remain.
- Singapore will soon start issuing a wearable device for contact tracing called “TraceTogether Token”. The token will be based on short-distance Bluetooth signals, logging interactions with nearby tokens. The device might be issued to everyone in Singapore.
- After stopping to report the cumulative number of infections and deaths over the weekend, the Brazilian government resumed publishing the data following a Supreme Court ruling. The number of confirmed cases in Brazil is currently almost 740,000 with more than 38,000 confirmed deaths.
